All electronics contain toxic materials.
If thrown in the trash they will leach into the landfill and may pollute ground water and the ocean.
Toxins from e-waste are dangerous to people and the 'āina.

If your electronics are working it is best to donate instead of recycle.
This maximizes value and helps citizens of our island.
For where to donate and additional recycling options and locations go to HawaiiZeroWaste.org/recycle/e-waste.

The State of Hawai'i law, "Electronics Device Recycling and Recovery", requires manufacturers of many electronic devices to provide recycling services.

The Kailua-Kona and Hilo locations above have been designated for limited free recycling.

Mālama (care for) our island and planet by keeping electronics out of the trash.
